

Training designed for ongoing needs

At PHT Systems, our relationship with you extends well past the initial purchase of your equipment. Our team is not only there to help you make the right purchase, but also to train your team when you need us, help you navigate operational and procedural issues that impact your bottom line, and more. Training is the most important piece of the puzzle; every piece of equipment in your kitchen, deli, or store underperforms if the proper training is not given to those operating it. Because of that, at PHT Systems, we provide free training – for the life of your equipment. And, our trainers understand your business. With extensive experience in the foodservice industry, our trainers know the challenges you face.

- ▶ Purchase of equipment - We are confident that our product offerings will be right for you because we extensively vet them to ensure quality and value.
- ▶ Initial training and testing - Our certified trainers with deep expertise in foodservice will come to your location to teach your entire team how to work with your new piece of equipment and can work with you to test a variety of products to ensure food quality is maintained with each and every use. We're always happy to help with menu ideas and talk through cooking techniques as well.
- ▶ Make recommendations - It is important that your team knows the best ways to use your equipment to ensure operational excellence, longevity, and cost-effectiveness. Once your team is fully trained, we will also share our recommendations for maintenance best practices with you.
- ▶ Re-training if necessary - PHT Systems offers free re-training for the life of the equipment that you purchase. Have employee turnover? No need to worry, we will come back and help train the new team members on the same equipment, all for free.

We understand not all your employees work during the day, so we offer flexible training schedules for your team, both day and night, to get everyone up to speed quickly and effectively. Our overarching goal at PHT Systems is to serve you and your business in whatever capacity you may need us – throughout our relationship together.
